Did your fave make NPR's list of best teen novels?

Los Angeles Times

J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter series tops NPR's list of 100 favorite teen novels: That's the entire set of seven books, from "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" to "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows." NPR announced the list Tuesday, voted on by listeners and readers.

The Top 10 include fantasies and dramas, science fiction and historical fiction, and most interestingly, contemporary books and classics. Suzanne Collins' "The Hunger Games" and its sequels, popularized by the hit film, came in at No. 2, followed immediately by the Harper Lee classic "To Kill a Mockingbird" (which was also a hit film way back in 1962).

Positions four through nine are dominated by John Green, a 34-year-old Printz Award winner, and J.R.R. Tolkien, who died in 1973 at the age of 81. Green comes in at No. 4 and No. 9, with "The Fault in Our Stars" and "Looking for Alaska," respectively. Tolkien's "The Hobbit" is at No. 5 and "Lord of the Rings" series at No. 7.

Rounding out the top 10 are a mix of classic and contemporary writers. J.D. Salinger's "The Catcher in the Rye" (1951) is at No. 6, Ray Bradbury's "Fahrenheit 451" (1953) at No. 8, and, from 2005, Markus Zusak's "The Book Thief" at No. 10.

The long 100 favorites list includes books that are sweet—"The Princess Bride" by William Goldman at No. 17—and books that are terrifying, such as No. 18, William Golding's "Lord of the Flies." There are best-sellers: "The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants" by Ann Brashares, the "Matched" series by Ally Condie, Stephenie Meyer's "Twilight" series. And there are major prize winners—Sherman Alexie's "The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian" won the National Book Award, "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time" won the Guardian Children's Fiction Prize, and M.T. Anderson's "Feed" won the Los Angeles Times Book Prize.

More than 75,000 people voted in NPR's poll about young adult books, selecting these top 100 from a master list of 235 semifinalists.

Simple solutions to CTA wait times

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 » tswartz@tribune.com
 » @tracyswartz

The Tribune reported Tuesday on a memo circulated by a high-ranking CTA official that said trains should not linger at stations waiting for riders to board. The CTA has since discredited the memo, which was written after CTA President Forrest Claypool complained that an operator closed and opened his doors "several" times at the Sedgwick Brown Line stop before departing.

Though CTA officials rejected the memo when questioned by the Tribune, it presents a good opportunity to talk about rush-hour train boarding.

As any regular rider knows, boarding times are slowed during rush hour as a crush of passengers try to squeeze on and off trains at high-capacity stations such as Belmont and Fullerton.

Much of this lag can be blamed on the riders who refuse to get out of the doorway when the train doors open, causing fellow riders to squeeze through a tighter space at the doorway. Also, if riders aren't paying attention and it's their stop, they try to leave the train late as others are getting on, which further slows the boarding process.

My take is that it's OK for trains to linger at the station outside of rush hour, when train service isn't as frequent, but they shouldn't wait during rush hour. The wait times are long enough as people exit and enter, and doors often open and shut multiple times because some riders don't realize they are standing at the door's edge.

Sometimes riders will force themselves onto the train even though there's no room because they don't trust that there's a train behind the current one. The CTA could help mitigate this problem by putting digital train trackers in each of its stations, especially in the subways, where cell service may be spotty for those checking the online Train Tracker.

The good news is the new rail cars with the aisle-facing seats may help. The aisle is wider, which should allow riders to move closer to the door more easily. Also, riders don't have to ask their seatmates to move so they can get up and exit. (The new rail cars are on the Green and Pink lines. The Red Line won't see these cars until at least next fall after the CTA's five-month renovation of its southern portion.)

Meanwhile, the CTA is examining its ridership systemwide. There are times—especially during Cubs games—when one or two full trains will arrive at stations, leaving platforms packed as passengers wait for a train that can accommodate them.

Train capacity needs to be beefed up in these bottleneck areas—then maybe there would be fewer boarding problems.

Let's send that memo to the CTA.

BREAKUP SIGNALS

YOU DID KNOW THIS WAS COMING, RIGHT?
THE 6 SIGNS YOUR RELATIONSHIP IS ON THE ROCKS

GETTY IMAGES

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Your boyfriend used to text or call you every day. You used to have your hands all over each other. Your girlfriend used to plan fun date nights.

The operative words being “used to.” As in, not anymore. Now you hear from him four days later. You two barely hold hands in public. And she’s all about going out with her friends instead.

What exactly is going on? Hate to break it to you, but all signs point to one thing: You, my friend, are about to be dumped. Welcome to Splitville. But you’re not alone; a number of celebrities lately have visited and checked into the Heartbreak Hotel. “Twilight”-hards were shocked that Kristen Stewart cheated on Robert Pattinson. Tom Cruise was caught off guard by Katie Holmes filing divorce papers in June. Kris Humphries seemed blindsided when Kim Kardashian filed for divorce.

Chances are, however, there were red flags that a breakup was about to happen. “Breaking up never comes out of nowhere, ever,” said David Wygant, an L.A.-based dating expert. “There’s so many signs people don’t want to admit.”

RedEye talked to dating experts to get clued in to the warning signs a relationship is on the rocks.

Any of the six signs is a good reason to check in with your significant other, experts said. Otherwise, the problems will get bigger. Nobody likes to face the end of a relationship, but as uncomfortable as it can be, experts suggest having a heart-to-heart conversation.

“It’s really about nipping it in the bud if you want to fix the relationship,” said Lisa Steadman, author of It’s a Breakup, Not a Breakdown.

LIVVAVANCO@TRIBUNE | @LIVVAVANCO

Hello?

Watch out for changes in communication.

Notice if the person takes longer to text back than he did before—or if he doesn’t call for three days when he used to call five times a day, Wygant said. It shows his significant other is no longer a priority and indicates a deeper problem.

“They come up with excuses: ‘I was working all day. I was really tired when I got home,’” Wygant said.

When together, not talking about important things and avoiding real issues in the relationship is the first sign the dynamic in the relationship has changed, Steadman said.

“In the beginning there was a lot of chemistry or you had fun together, whatever it is, that starts to dissipate,” she said. “The things you appreciated and enjoyed in the relationship kind of go away.”

Going the distance

It’s a bad sign when the couple starts to live separate lives, Steadman said.

Whether a significant other is spending more time with friends or simply making major decisions without consulting her partner, it creates distance in the relationship.

“Typically you can feel them withdrawing and you don’t feel as connected to them as you used to,” Steadman said.

Not bringing sexy back

Can't remember the last time there were fireworks in the bedroom? Uh-oh.

A good indicator something is up is when the sex goes down, Wygant said. It may mean the couple doesn't do it for each other sexually if, for example, he wants to get sex over with quickly or would rather go to sleep or watch a movie than get it on, he said.

The couple may be going through the motions and only connecting on a physical level, Steadman said. What's more likely is that the sex life is non-existent and excuses are being made for not getting lucky, she said.

"Maybe you have a pretty consistent sex life and all of the sudden it's once a month. Every time you make a move, you're shot down," she said.

Lip service

If the same conversation about what's wrong with the relationship happens over and over again and nothing ever changes, a breakup is on the way, Wygant said.

The "we need to talk" line isn't always a preview to a breakup, Steadman said, but get ready for a serious talk. Usually, she said, it means "you're about to get a bomb dropped on you."

Watch my body

Pay attention to body language because it changes on the verge of a breakup, experts said.

For example, a partner sitting on the couch five feet away from you and pouting is troublesome, Wygant said. It's not a good sign either when a significant other pushes his partner away when she tries to kiss him or freezes when she tries to hold hands or stiffens when she tries to touch him.

Also watch out if a partner rolls his eyes and acts like it's a sacrifice to be affectionate, Steadman said. "It's just not loving, supportive or reciprocal, and it's more of a duty," she said.

Shape up

When a person stops caring about his or her appearance, it's like he or she is checking out of the relationship, Steadman said.

On the flip side, if he or she is suddenly on a weight-loss kick, it's possible the person wants to be hot and sexy for somebody else and is getting ready for an exit, she said.

If a partner is getting in shape and the sex isn't increasing, a breakup may be about to happen, Wygant said.

CHOOSE YOUR OWN BREAKUP ADVENTURE

Buckle up. Dealing with a breakup can bring on an emotional roller coaster—from anger to sadness to relief. That's when you crank up the music and either sulk as you listen to sad songs or fiercely sing an empowering anthem at the top of your lungs. Punjab Chief Minister Parkash Singh Badal (center) is greeted by Sikh followers and supporters at O'Hare. ANTONIO PEREZ/TRIBUNE

A somber reception

Indian official, in U.S. to attend wedding, to meet with grieving families

Chicago Tribune

Many Indians planned to greet Punjab's chief minister with music and banners as he arrived Tuesday at O'Hare—but that quickly changed following this week's fatal shootings inside a Milwaukee-area Sikh temple. Instead, a somber crowd welcomed the leader with comforting hugs and handshakes.

"Everybody is in a gloomy mood," said Lakhwant Singh Komal, 65, of Skokie, before Chief Minister Parkash Singh Badal's arrival. "We're trying to be positive."

Badal, who also is a Sikh, is in the U.S. with several other ministers from his cabinet to attend the weekend wedding of a Punjabi official's niece in Milwaukee. Members of the cabinet, who made the travel plans prior to the shootings, were at a loss for words when asked how the Sikh community will move forward.

As chief minister, Badal is the leader of the legislative and executive bodies of Punjab, a state in northwest India. He said his first priority will be meeting with grieving families, many of whom want the bodies of their loved ones sent to India.

Before being whisked to his car by state police and other security, Badal urged members of the Sikh community and Punjabis to keep "peace and harmony" despite the recent slayings. He added that many in India still are in shock.

"Everybody is worried," Badal said. "We never expected such a thing would happen in the U.S."

About 100 people waited for Badal in the Chicago airport, with some coming from as far as New York and Seattle. Nearly everyone there said the chief minister would have been welcomed with live music, scores of flowers and signs if not for the grave circumstances. Still, some came with small bouquets and cameras.

Mani Singh, 31, of Mount Prospect, said he and other Sikhs have been embraced by other religions in recent days. He said more than 2,000 people of different faiths and cultures attended a vigil at a Palatine gurdwara, or temple, in honor of the victims.

"We don't look at it as a Sikh tragedy. We look at it as an American tragedy," he said.

DRAMA ON THE RAILS

CTA news came fast and furious Tuesday. Here are some of the stories that caught our attention. TRIBUNE

Blue Line derailment

Derailed track maintenance equipment early Tuesday stopped service on the Forest Park branch of the Blue Line between the Harlem and Forest Park stations, according to the CTA. There were no injuries in the 3:35 a.m. derailment, and the CTA was looking into the cause.

Man survives rail fall

A man was helped back onto a Green Line platform at the Roosevelt stop Tuesday after falling onto the tracks, authorities said. The man was taken to a local hospital for evaluation, but did not appear to be seriously injured, officials said.

Razor blade arrest

A man was arrested after a camera caught him using a razor to cut another man's pocket and take his wallet on a Red Line train, police say. Matthew Green, 56, was arrested about 5 a.m. Sunday with a razor blade at the Grand Avenue station.

EXPRESS LINES

» During a Tuesday appearance in Elk Grove Village, presumptive GOP presidential nominee Mitt Romney accused President Obama of trying to weaken work requirements for welfare recipients, feeding a "culture of dependency" and undermining a hard-fought bipartisan agreement that is credited with reducing poverty in America.

» A Megabus struck a 76-year-old woman crossing the street in the West Loop on Tuesday, fatally injuring her, authorities said.

» A 19-year-old man was charged with misdemeanor battery and assault Sunday after he punched an 11-year-old girl in the abdomen to get her souvenir beach ball, police say. TRIBUNE

1 Rain comes too late for corn

Midday forecasts for wetter weather in the Midwest this week will help the late-planted soybean crop but will arrive too late to be of benefit to the drought-stressed corn crop, an agricultural meteorologist said.

2 Armed man caught at 'Dark Knight'

Police in Westlake, Ohio, arrested a man Saturday who allegedly brought several weapons and ammo into a showing of "The Dark Knight Rises," a police spokesman said Tuesday.

3 Refinery fire extinguished

An hours-long fire that hit the core of Chevron Corp's Richmond, Calif., refinery, the second-largest in the state, was extinguished early Tuesday as fears of a months-long closure caused a 25-cent spike in regional gasoline prices.

4 Syrian rebels low on bullets

Syrian rebels trying to fight off an army offensive in Aleppo said Tuesday they were running low on bullets as President Bashar al-Assad's forces encircled their stronghold at the southern entrance to the country's biggest city.

5 Monsoon swamps Philippine capital

Deadly torrential rains submerged much of Manila and surrounding areas Tuesday, forcing nearly 270,000 people to flee their homes with more flooding expected as a tropical storm passes through the region, officials said.

Gunman pleads guilty in Tucson slayings

7 TUCSON, Ariz. A 23-year-old college dropout pleaded guilty Tuesday to killing six people and wounding 13 others, including then-U.S. congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, in an Arizona shooting rampage last year, and will be spared the death penalty in exchange.

Jared Loughner entered his guilty pleas in federal court in Tucson shortly after he was ruled mentally competent to stand trial on charges, including first degree murder, by District Judge Larry Burns.

"I plead guilty," Loughner, dressed in a khaki prison jumpsuit, said to each of the 19 counts read in court by Burns.

Giffords, a representative from Arizona who was seen as a rising star in the Democratic Party, was meeting constituents at a Tucson supermarket Jan. 8, 2011, when she was shot through the head at close range. The six people killed include a federal judge and a 9-year-old girl.

Under a plea agreement, federal prosecutors, who originally charged Loughner with 49 criminal counts, have agreed not to seek the death penalty against him. Burns will sentence Loughner on Nov. 15, and he could face multiple terms of life in prison.

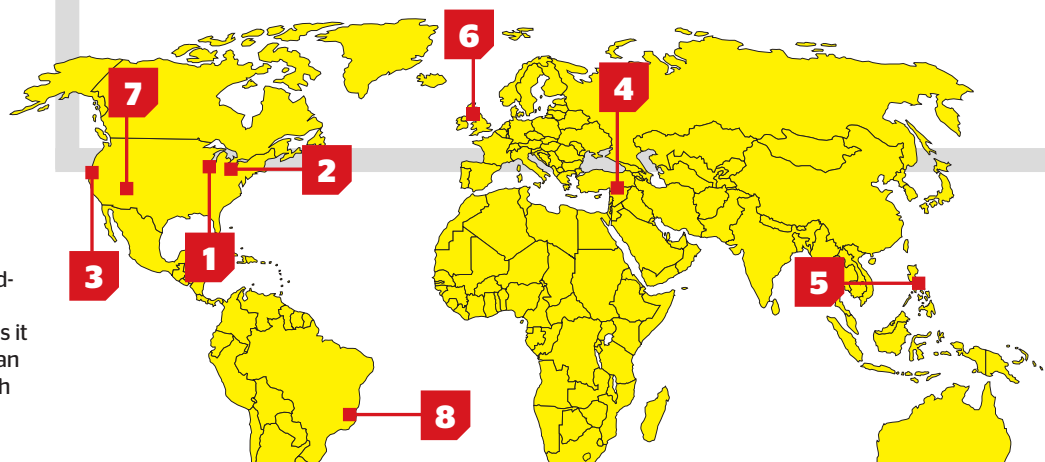

The 19 counts he pleaded guilty to include murder, attempted murder and the attempted assassination of Giffords.

Mark Kelly, Giffords' husband, said in a statement before the hearing that the couple were "satisfied" with the plea agreement.

Kate: The gold medal here should go to whoever's doing the Russian team's bikini waxing. For serious.

Trent: This is why I'm afraid of clowns. And why I'm gay.

Brian: It's amazing they can concentrate on their routines with those spiders clinging to their eyes.

Ernest: Looks like those creepy porcelain figurines white people's grandmothers have in their front room at their houses.

Kate: See folks, you CAN repurpose leftover costumes from "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." Just add nose plugs!

Trent: And this is how babies are born, kids.

Brian: The upside to these suits: You can spill your dinner on yourself and only improve the design.

Ernest: Looks like the Doppler radar. I ain't mad at that flexibility though...

Kate: A suit with that many sparkles? You can't "Beat It!"

Trent: If they were swimming to "Bad," my "so-terrible-that-it's-good" meter would explode.

Brian: This is as close as synchronized swimming is going to get to being a "Thriller."

Ernest: I'm not messing with these! They even got Mike's almost nonexistent nose right. Damn, I miss Michael. "tears up"

Kate: Proof that money can't buy good taste. Or an even spray tan, apparently.

Trent: The Swiss team is wearing suits made of money from Mitt Romney's bank account.

Brian: Pamela Fischer (the one on the left) just got a good look at what they're wearing. We're shocked too.

Ernest: Can honestly say I'm surprised Lady Gaga never attempted this one. Also: GET MONEY! WHACHA SAY WHACHA SAY NOW!

RING IT ON!

WHAT'S BUZZING
AT THE GAMES TODAY

Suckers for speed

Wallace Spearmon (above) actually can say he's beaten Usain Bolt. The Chicago native said he and Bolt are friends and chat often. Spearmon also said that after he bought a new Nissan GTR and told Bolt about it, the Jamaican star went out and bought the same one.

"And now he has a sponsorship deal with them, so Lord knows what's going to happen to his car after a while," Spearmon said, "but as of now my car is faster."

As for who's fastest on the track, we'll find out soon. Spearmon and Bolt both qualified for Wednesday's finals in the 200 meters.

THE MOUTHWATCH

"Oh, I had the 'Oh, [bleep]' moments. I had about two minutes of 'Oh, [bleep]' moments."

—U.S. women's water polo coach Adam Krikorian, on calling an illegal timeout that resulted in the tying goal on a penalty shot for Australia on Tuesday. Lucky for him, the Americans won in overtime and will face Spain for the gold medal Thursday.

EVENT OF THE DAY Beach volleyball: Women's final

7 p.m. NBC

Ahem, if you're through admiring the scenery, there's a title on the line. The U.S. is guaranteed gold—and silver—as two-time defending gold medalists Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh Jennings take on Jenn Kessy and April Ross. U-S-A! U-S-A!

Kate: Really, USA? That's the most American we can get? Someone should have just wrapped these ladies in the backdrop from the set of "The Colbert Report."

Trent: I'm offended these U.S. suits aren't more offensive. Someone bust out a bedazzler!

Brian: Appropriate, because the word "hot" does come to mind.

Ernest: The red, white and blue touch is nice. Can't lie though, this looks like a horrible attempt to redesign the Illinois Bell Logo.

1 Why is there so much discussion of gymnast Gabby Douglas' hair?

She hasn't pommaded her critics yet.

Because there are a lot of self-hating blacks and ignorant people out there. Idiots.

I haven't noticed her hair. I was too busy staring at the GIANT GOLD MEDAL AROUND HER NECK.

Because she's wearing so much shiny gold that that's all anyone can see.

Because people are dumb.

2 Luol Deng and Great Britain men's hoops finally got a win. Congratulate them.

"Great, Britain."

"Cheers, mates! Um ... cheerio pip pip bobbledy wobble-dy drop drop it like it's hot and all that."

"I say, good show! Cheerio, tut-tut and all that good rot. Or something."

"My poor English aside, Deng fine job even if playing with an injured wrist."

I'd high-five Luol, but I'd rather he rest that wrist of his.

3 A U.S. Olympian in judo was caught with marijuana in his system. Insert joke here.

Now he's an Olympian in Ju-D'oh.

Attention all marketing-deficient weed dealers: Call it "that judo," because it'll knock you out.

Wait for it ... he rubbed up against Michael Phelps by accident.

His aunt Mary Jane told him to aim high rather than hide in the grass.

Marijuana use is clearly not a laughing matter, so I have no joke to insert here.

4 When the Cubs say Matt Garza has a "stress reaction," they mean ...

... he's a Cubs fan. Stress is a typical reaction to a Cubs game.

... he's got a bachelor of arts in Grade A bonafide ho-etry.

... everyone with a newborn has a "stress reaction." Wait until that kid is a teenager.

... he's out indefinitely to avoid an eventual Carlos Zambrano reaction.

... he's due for an arm amputation any day now.

5 How can the NFL and its referees solve their labor dispute?

Coin toss. NFL heads, while players can go for tails.

Let Ed Hochuli arm-wrestle Roger Goddell. Get that weird-voiced black ref to do play-by-play.

One word: s'mores.

Stop the false starts and personal fouls and toss a coin! Whoever wins receives.

I'd suggest instant replay, but I don't think they have a few more months left to sort this thing out.

Never fear—the U.S. still is golden

Jack M. Silverstein

» @tribune.com
» @readjack

When the U.S. men's basketball team reached halftime of its showdown with Argentina on Monday, the Americans held only a six-point advantage in their previous six quarters. Of course, in the six quarters prior to that stretch, the Americans' advantage was 117 points.

In fact, until they blew the Argentina game open with a 42-point third quarter, the U.S. seemed destined for their closest pair of consecutive wins since the final two games of the 2000 Olympics.

These are the ups and downs of international basketball in 2012. The fear and awe factor of the Dream Team is long gone, as expected, now that NBA championship teams routinely rely on international talent such as Manu Ginobili, Tony Parker, Pau Gasol and Dirk Nowitzki.

But the fear and awe also are gone on the American side: the fear of embarrassment, the awe of themselves.

As recently as 2004, a one-point halftime lead would have caused squirming from American players, fans and media. Now, although some fans and media haven't come around, the players at least understand that the competition's the thing.

This isn't gymnastics. There are no deductions for sloppy play. Basketball is more like running or swimming—first one to the finish line wins, the finish line being the most points at the buzzer.

And for any of their perceived flaws, Redeem Team II is undoubtedly excellent at reaching the finish line first. They are averaging more points than the Dream Team, with a comparable margin of victory. They finished group play 5-0 and begin the knockout stage Wednesday.

They won a game by 83 points but can still grind out the close ones. Kevin Durant is averaging more points than any previous American pro in the Olympics, while Carmelo Anthony set a U.S. single-game scoring record. They rebound, pass, defend and are shooting better than their 2008 counterparts.

In the words of announcer John Amaechi, "They may not be a dream team, but they're sure not a normal team."

Champagne all around!

Break out the tuxedos and red carpet. Well, sort of. In a recent survey of major league managers conducted by Baseball America, several Chicago players made a strong impression. Here's how the managers ranked...

- » Chris Sale: Best slider and third-best fastball, AL
- » A.J. Pierzynski: Second-best defensive catcher, AL
- » Darwin Barney: Second-best defensive second baseman, NL
- » Tony Campana: Third-fastest player, NL

FAMILY BUSINESS

Art-pop duo This Is Cinema recruits parental assistance and wonders about a possible soap-related inheritance

CHI-TUNES

Andy Downing

» redeye@tribune.com

This Is Cinema's debut EP "Cycles" sounds like it could be the work of a sprawling collective. Yet the album, which incorporates everything from sweeping string sections to squiggly electronic textures alongside the usual array of guitars, drums and synthesizers, is largely the work of just two musicians: Logan Square residents Ben Babbitt and Theo Karon.

Babbitt's upbringing (both of his parents are professional musicians) inspired much of the art-pop duo's lush, ornate sound.

"I grew up surrounded by the music my parents were playing, which consisted mainly of orchestral and classical music," he said. "And that sound was very important in the formation of my musical brain."

Reached on a tour stop in New York, Babbitt, 23, discussed the pluses and minuses of touring with only one other band member, the parental connection on "Cycles" and his family's long-lost soap fortune.

Considering the band name and the orchestration you apply on some of these songs, I was wondering if you actually take any inspiration from film scores.

I think when we were younger we both watched a lot of films and enjoyed certain soundtracks. I guess it's sort of inevitable for that to come up because of the name, and the way music functions in film can sometimes be analogous to what we're trying to do.

What films made an impact on you growing up?

Maybe "Fantasia." I also grew up really liking this film version of "The Magic Flute," an opera by Mozart. My parents are professional classical musicians, so I watched that a lot as a kid.

Have you ever recorded alongside your parents?

Actually, everybody in my family but my youngest brother is on the record. My parents play strings on it.

How did your folks resist the urge to throw you and your two younger brothers in a van and drive around like some classical music version of The Partridge Family?

[Laughs.] Yeah, that didn't happen because we were too stubborn. But we would watch "The Sound of Music"—that's another film that was a big part of my childhood—and my dad always liked the idea of having our own version of the von Trapp family singers.

This is a fairly dense record. Is it difficult to re-create that sound with just you and Theo onstage?

We figured out how to tear things down in some ways but also reinvent that density and recreate it electronically. We're using more electronic drum loops and synthesizers. It's just the two of us, but it's certainly not a minimalist version of the record.

Is it a challenge being on the road with only one other guy versus touring with a band? Like, do you ever get sick of one another?

[Laughs.] Well, Theo and I are such good friends in general, and we spent many, many hours in our recording studio making the record together so we're used to being in a small room for hours at a time. It's actually been nice. We can take a smaller vehicle [the duo is currently touring in a Subaru Outback] and expenses are less than they can be touring with a band. It certainly has its challenges. With a group there can be someone to diffuse the tension. With two people, if there's tension it's up to us to resolve it.

You titled one song "Madchen," which is German for "maid." Can you actually speak German?

Yeah, my family is German and I speak German, so [the song] isn't just randomly in another language.

How often do you get to bust out those foreign language skills?

Not very often. I'd love to speak German more, but in this country it's really not one of the major languages.

I suppose you could always hit up the German beer halls in Lincoln Square if you ever got the urge.

BEN BABBITT

PERSONALITY TEST

Yeah. It's just so rare. Occasionally I'll encounter German speakers on tour and it's always fun [to speak with them], but I'll often forget it's something I can do until I run into someone who can.

I noticed there's a Benjamin Babbitt on Wikipedia who made his fortune with Babbitt's Best Soap. Is he any relation?

Yes. He is maybe my grandfather's grandfather? It's something like that. There's some relation there for sure.

So are you the heir to some massive soap fortune?

I wish. If there ever was that kind of inheritance I was never told of it, and I'm sure it's long gone.

ANDY DOWNING IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.
@REDEYEMUSIC

What's the last album you bought?
"The new Dirty Projectors record [Swing Lo Magellan]"

Song you've listened to on repeat recently? "This Aaliyah song 'Rock the Boat.'"

Song you never want to hear again?
"I can't think of any song I never want to hear again."

Best concert you've seen in the last year? "My friends, Thin Hymns, recently played a really great show at a church in Bridgeport."

New band you don't know personally that deserves to be big? "I don't know. I'd rather talk about people I do know personally that deserved to be big. I'll say the Cairo Gang."

Chicago's best music venue?
"Roxaboxen. It's a venue and art space in Pilsen."

Get into superhero
shapeWonder Woman

Wonder Woman demands respect, Thurman says. "Not because she can squeeze into that tight costume," he says, "but because she has an intimidating, powerful, womanly build."

Nutrition: Good amounts of high-quality calories, including healthy carbs and a lot of protein to build and maintain muscle; take in healthy fats and don't skimp on the veggies.

Training: Weightlifting 3-4 times a week focusing on compound movements such as squats, presses and weighted lunges with reps of 8-15. Light cardio 2-3 times a week for about 30 minutes, including light cardio after weight training to keep fat percentage down.

Spider-Man

Climbing buildings isn't an easy task, which is why Spider-Man, aka Peter Parker, is a small and agile individual. He can climb from building to building without problems.

Nutrition: Watch the amount of calories you take in, as Spidey doesn't need as many to maintain his smaller physique as, say, Wolverine does for his massive muscles. Your calories will come from high amounts of carbs by eating whole grains, moderate amounts of protein and high quantities of vegetables.

Training: Resistance training twice a week consisting of a full-body workout doing 10-20 reps per exercise to achieve muscular endurance and lean muscle tissue. Great resistance exercises would include push-ups, planks, rows and lunges. Cardio will be done 3-4 days a week, including long-distance runs, bike rides or walks of 45-60 minutes.

Comic book and superhero fans will dress as their favorite characters when Wizard World Chicago Comic Con begins Thursday in Rosemont. But it takes more than a costume to build the powerful muscles of Wolverine, or Lara Croft's lean, curvy look, or the stamina of, say, a Ghostbuster.

So who you gonna call?

RedEye rang up Total Nonstop Action Wrestling star Lisa Marie "Lara" Varon, as well as trainers Joey Thurman and Marcus Warren of Morph Personal Training, to get some tips for getting into superhero shape.

WIZARD WORLD: IF YOU GO

When: Thursday through Sunday

Where: Donald E. Stephens Convention Center, 5555 N. River Road, Rosemont

Cost: $35 (for advance purchase of a one-day ticket) to $799 for a VIP meet-and-greet with three past "Star Trek" captains: William Shatner, Avery Brooks and Scott Bakula

Ghostbuster

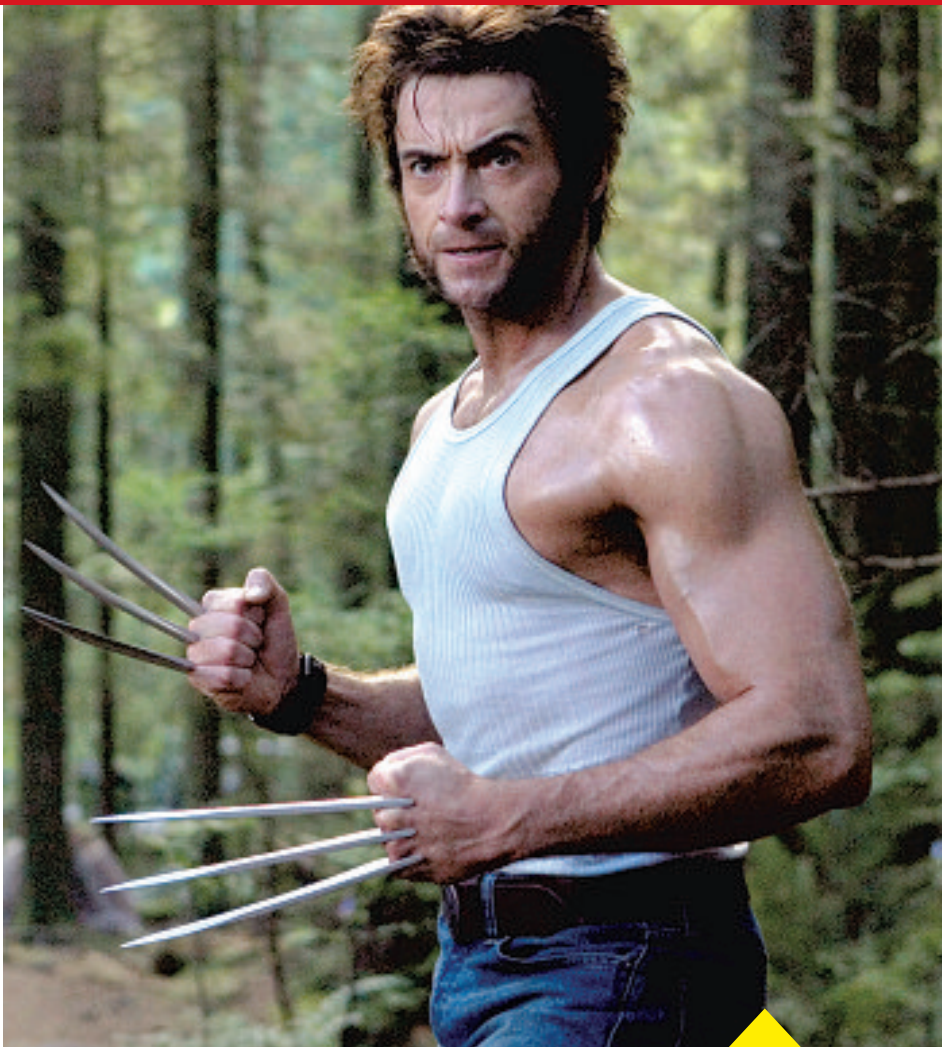

Fighting the marshmallow man doesn't require you to take your shirt off, but it does require strength to carry a proton pack while chasing ghosts.

Nutrition: "To have an above-average build, your nutrition requirements aren't going to be as strict," Warren says. "The main thing will be to eat a balanced, clean diet of good protein, carbs, vegetables and healthy fat. If it comes pre-packaged, try to stay away from it."

Training: Weight train 2-3 times a week focusing on your biceps, back, legs and core muscles. Do 10-15 reps an exercise, and do exercises like rows, pull-ups, biceps curls and lunges. Cardio should be added a couple of days a week for a consistent 30-60 minutes in the form of walking, riding a bike, swimming or rock climbing.

"The most important thing is to be physically active," Varon says. "Taking the stairs rather than the elevator certainly has some value. But if you want a real transformation, you need a structured fitness regimen."

Wolverine

"Wolverine is a strong, stocky, powerful character meant to be intimidating at first sight," Thurman says.

Nutrition: Diet composed of high amounts of quality calories consisting of protein from lean meats and equal to higher amounts of quality carbohydrates, such as quinoa, oats (preferably steel-cut oats), whole grains and spelt bread. You will need to eat your greens to get and maintain that six-pack, so eat a lot of veggies.

Training: To get the amount of muscle that Wolverine has, you must train the way he looks—heavy and hard. Lift weights 4-5 days a week focusing on compound heavy movements such as squats and presses. Do 6-12 reps per exercise. Your cardio should consist of running sprints, jumping rope or boxing a couple days a week for 20-30 minutes. Intensity is the key.

Lara Croft, tomb raider

Lara Croft is known for her strong arms and legs so she can raid tombs and kick some major butt.

Nutrition: Clean and well-balanced diet of "foods from nature," Thurman says, which means unprocessed foods with no preservatives such as fresh fruits, vegetables and meats. "Eat like a caveman," he says. You'll need a lot of proteins, too, along with healthy carbs and fats.

Training: Hit the gym 2-4 days a week, focusing on a split routine of upper body and lower body with focus on "show" parts, including arms and legs. Squat with weights; do deadlifts, hamstring curls and biceps curls. Do an overall body resistance training program that includes push-ups, planks, rows and lunges. Just make sure to work all the major muscle groups: arms, legs, chest and back. And throw in one intense ab workout a week. Get short intense cardio by playing sports.

FOOD QUEST

LOCATION: TAYLOR STREET

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE
Lately, the crowds strolling Little Italy’s main drag, Taylor Street, are just as likely to be in search of a craft cocktail as clams casino. In the past few years, the street has welcomed fresh faces such as lively restaurant and wine bar Davanti Enoteca, punk gastropub Three Aces and charming small-plates spot Urban Union. But if you’ve experienced only the new kids on the block, it’s time for a history lesson: Many of the area’s culinary legends have existed for decades and helped establish the neighborhood as an Italian mecca. This half-mile stretch of Taylor Street provides a crash course. KBERNOT@TRIBUNE.COM | @KBERNOT

1. First: Al’s Beef 1079 W. Taylor St. 312-226-4017
In 1938, Al Ferreri and two of his family members introduced the city to the now-iconic Italian beef sandwich: thinly sliced, marinated beef, peppers and spicy giardiniera on a soak-it-all-up roll ($5.50 for a regular; $7.70 for a large). The original location is steeped as much in history as it is in juicy gravy, so you’ll get a taste of old Chicago as you lean over the counter in the perfect sandwich-eating “Italian Stance.”

2. Next: Mario’s Italian Lemonade 1066 W. Taylor St.
Whatever you do, just don’t call it “Italian ice.” Mario’s serves Italian lemonade, and the plain lemon flavor ($1.50 for a small; $2.50 for a medium) at this red-, white- and green-painted stand is simple, but leagues better than competitors. It’s a little sweet, a lot tart and flecked with actual pieces of lemon peel. The only time to choose another flavor would be when Mario’s happens to serve its elusive, seasonal peach flavor. Order from the front window, then try to avoid a brain freeze as you wander west on Taylor. Since 1954, Mario’s has been synonymous with summer, and it’s open May through September.

3. Last: Conte di Savoia 1438 W. Taylor St. 312-666-3471
Finish your excursion the way a true Italian would, with an espresso. Market and deli Conte di Savoia is known for its piled-high sandwiches, but caffeine freaks know the Illy espresso ($1.42) served here is as good as what you’d get across the Atlantic, and the 10-ounce cappuccino for $1.50 might be the best deal in town. You probably won’t be able to stomach any more goodies after this meal, but peruse the shelves for imported meats, cheeses, pastas and oils to take home as souvenirs of your excursion.

Wait, Wait ... Don't Kill Me

SEND IT UP!

These 5 parodies riff on everyone from the president to Harry Potter

By Julia Borcherts

FOR REDEYE

If ever there's a time to escape into the lighter side of everything, it's summer. And these humorous shows—which send up everything from politicians to pop culture, not to mention the Queen of Talk Shows and the King of Pop—are here to help.

Wait, Wait ... Don't Kill Me

9 p.m. Fridays through Aug. 24 at Donny's Skybox Theater, 1608 N. Wells St.

Tickets: $13; $10 for students; 312-337-3992; secondcity.com

The title is inspired by the National Public Radio quiz show program, "Wait Wait... Don't Tell Me!" but local comedy troupe Robot vs. Dinosaur's campy sketch revue spoofs all things horror—except for vampires and werewolves, which are so 2011. What you will get, however, is a Vincent Price-style host and over-the-top scenes set to spine-tingling music and sound effects that explore things that go bump in the night. Think: A first date at a couples' cooking class for witches, a train that turns babies into adults and a West Coast-style rap—complete with thunderclap beats and wolf howl hooks—about why R.L. Stine's "Goosebumps" books are the new aphrodisiac.

Potted Potter

Nov. 13 through Dec. 16 at Broadway Playhouse, 175 E. Chestnut St.

Tickets: $39.75-$69.75; 800-775-2000; broadwayinchicago.com (on sale Aug. 17)

Get your flying broomsticks ready—former BBC-TV hosts Daniel Clarkson and Jefferson Turner land in the Chi this fall to perform their Olivier Award-nominated parody, which takes on the challenge of condensing ("potting") all seven Harry Potter books into one musical comedy featuring multiple costume changes, crazy props and lots of Hogwarts magic. The production, which sold out off-Broadway and in London, includes an optional audience-interactive Quidditch game played with a set of rules unique to the show.

Barack All Night!

Midnight Saturday through Sept. 22 at iO, 3541 N. Clark St.

Tickets: $5; 773-880-0199; ioimprov.com

Here's some change we can believe in: President Obama—played by local improv comedians Patrick Rowland and Nnamdi Ngwe in rotation; this week it's Ngwe—takes on a new career as a late-night talk show host in a production complete with a first lady sidekick (Brianna Baker), musical director (Claire Meyer), monologues, desk pieces and so-called interviews with celebrities. This week's shows include guests Bono (Nicholas Hassebrock) and Keira Knightley (Sarah Shook), as well as sets by stand-up comedians and guest musicians as, um, themselves.

Oprah's Last Show: A Musical and [Bleep] You, I Love You, Bye: The Rahm Emanuel Story

8 p.m. Fridays through Oct. 17 ("Oprah" no show Aug. 17) and 8 p.m. Saturdays through Aug. 25 ("Rahm;" no show Aug. 18) at Annoyance Theatre, 4830 N. Broadway

Tickets: $20 each; 773-561-4665; annoyanceproductions.com

How much do Chicagoans love to send up our own? An enormous amount, apparently, as these two productions have been running almost continuously since their debuts 17 months ago and 13 months ago, respectively. In "Oprah," which is part play and part sketch comedy, the talk show queen attempts to get outta town, but the ghost of Mayor Richard J. Daley steps in to prevent her defection. In "Rahm," you'll see humorous flashbacks, PowerPoint presentations and songs that trace the family man-ballet dancer-rapper's ascent from decidedly unremarkable child to Windy City Emperor.

That Was It: The Tragic Tale of Our King Michael Jackson

7:30 p.m. Friday through Sept. 28 at Gorilla Tango Theatre, 1919 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Tickets: $15; 773-598-4549; gorillatango.com

Grab a fedora and a sparkly glove and celebrate the anniversary of Jacko's birth (Aug. 29) with this homage—told with humor but also a lot of love—in which a Greek chorus and their prophet Tiemze (TMZ) explore the King of Pop's journey to superstardom, celebrity friendships, fall from grace—and, of course, his iconic dance moves.

Hope for better marriage, movie

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» mpais@tribune.com
» @mattpais

Is it asking too much that a movie about a married couple trying to recapture the spark avoid something as obvious as Al Green’s “Let’s Stay Together?”

Apparently. “Hope Springs” has no interest in surprise or unearthing anything below the surface. Sure, closed-off grump Arnold (Tommy Lee Jones) wouldn’t admit that his 31-year marriage to Kay (Meryl Streep) classifies as anything less than rosy. She makes his breakfast each morning and doesn’t complain when he falls asleep in front of a TV that’s always set to golf. (“It’s like being married to ESPN,” she eventually admits.) Kay, however, longs to recapture a “real” marriage, and she thinks a weekend with Maine marriage counselor Dr. Feld (Steve Carell) could shake the dust off this Nebraska couple that hasn’t had sex in close to five years.

Hope Springs
PG-13

In fact, sex represents nearly all that first-time feature screenwriter Vanessa Taylor (“Game of Thrones”) has on her mind. Dr. Feld asks questions almost exclusively focused on Arnold and Kay’s sex life and fantasies. The questions are legitimate. Physical harmony, of course, counts for a lot in a relationship, and “Hope Springs” deserves points for embracing that aspect of its 60-something characters’ lives. Years of poor communication and the resulting emotional distance have fueled the physical gap between Arnold and Kay. The trouble in the latest shallow effort from director David Frankel (“The Big Year,” “Marley and Me”) comes from the characterization of a tired marriage without nuance (unlike, say, the beautiful and heartbreaking portrait of aging love in “Away From Her”). Anyone glancing at Kay and Arnold can spot their unhappiness.

“Hope Springs” resists getting too cutesy with its small-town setting or overdoing its

Meryl Streep in ‘Hope Springs’

sex jokes, though awkwardly underplaying Kay gripping cookie dough in the grocery store and considering using a banana for a certain kind of practice results in neither a laugh nor a moment of truth with the right tone. It goes without saying that Streep and Jones can deliver when required, and when Kay and Arnold put some effort into each other, the actors capture a shared history between people trying to prevent it from being nothing more than history. Mostly, though, this tale asks us to wait around until these people recognize what we see immediately, resting on simple notions of romantic detachment and tropes like playing on the kitchen floor as the epitome of sexual adventurousness.

“Hope Springs” becomes what Arnold fears ordering at the upscale diner in Great Hope Springs, Maine: comfort food whose flavor doesn’t justify the price.

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

I kind of hoped 6-year-old Alana Johnson's 15 minutes of fame were up after she became a sensation for her appearances on "Toddlers & Tiaras," TLC's reality show about the train wreck known as child beauty pageants. My hopes, however, have been dashed. Why? Because "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo."

That's right, TLC has given the "go-go" juice-swilling camera hog a six-part series of her own, and while watching the premiere I sat, slack-jawed and scratching my head, wondering why TLC wants so badly to hold this little girl and her family up for ridicule.

The spinoff's premiere follows Alana without the sequins, eye makeup and age-inappropriate costumes she wears at the "glam" pageants. She and "Mama June" are joined by chalk-miner dad "Sugar Bear" and Alana's sisters: 12-year-old Lauryn "Pumpkin," 15-year-old Jessica "Chubbs" and 17-year-old Anna "Chickadee."

We see the family in their natural rural McIntyre, Ga., habitat, where they do fun things like belly flopping in mud pits, picking up road

Here Comes Honey Boo Boo
9 p.m. Wednesday,
TLC

kill for grilling and bobbing for pig's feet.

They get serious, however, when Alana enters a smaller pageant to practice for a bigger one. That's when we see her transformation into Honey Boo Boo, as when she says, whipping her head from side to side with attitude, "Ain't nobody going to take home that trophy but me, honey boo boo, child."

But what happens when she doesn't? She breaks down in tears. It makes you wonder what all this exploitation will do to her in the long run. I also questioned June's motives for putting so much time, energy and money into the pageants. Then I realized June is the Coupon Queen from TLC's "Extreme Couponing."

Seems to me she's desperate to stay in the spotlight. And all I can say to that is, "Honey, bye-bye."

THREE TO PLAY

BY RYAN SMITH | FOR REDEYE

New Super Mario Bros. 2

Nintendo 3DS

!!! Greed is good when you're

Mario. He may be a simple plumber from Brooklyn, but the Nintendo star might qualify as a one-percenter in the goofy-but-fun sequel to "New Super Mario Bros." In addition to the usual task of saving the princess from mortal danger, he must also collect tens of thousands of gold coins in a world that's suddenly bursting with the stuff. Gold rings turn enemies into money and a golden flower power-up turns Mario into a tubby King Midas whose power transmutes bricks and baddies into coins. "New Super Mario Bros 2" doesn't break any new ground, but it's impossible not to enjoy zooming around in a raccoon suit or hopping on the heads of Koopas once again.

Amazing Alex

iOS, Android

!!! Rovio's first major non-avian game doesn't stray too far from the formula that made "Angry Birds" a massive success. Projectiles are fired, objects collapse and one to three stars are earned for success. "Amazing Alex" follows the adventures of a mop-headed kid who concocts all sorts of household Rube Goldberg machines—those complex devices designed to do simple tasks like pop balloons. Solving the game's puzzles can be sublimely satisfying, but they soon get so frustratingly difficult that you'll likely be questioning Alex's "amazing" credentials.

Orcs Must Die 2

PC

!!! It's apparently not enough to simply kill an orc by sword or bow. In "Orcs Must Die 2," your player must utilize a whole arsenal of weapons, traps and trinkets to stop a horde of the green-skinned beasts. Money earned from your slayings can be used to purchase things like tar to dump on the floor to slow orcs down, or arrows that spit from the wall like a contraption out of an Indiana Jones movie. The action eventually gets repetitive but the entertainment value of "Orcs Must Die 2" doubles when playing cooperatively with a friend online.

RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Phone case for losers

BiKN iPhone 4/4S Starter Kit

$99.99 with tags and a USB charger at bikn.com
What it is: An iPhone case with a brain to help find important stuff—from your keys to your purse or your pet. And if you find your keys or your dog but not your phone, press the button on one of the little BiKN tags to trigger the alarm on the smart case, and the sound will guide you to your iPhone. Indoors, the BiKN can help you find things within 50 to 100 feet, and outside it has a range up to 500 feet. The BiKN kit includes the brainy case, two smart tags and a micro-USB charger. The case and tags work with the free BiKN iPhone app.

The good: We're always losing our keys or our phone in paperwork clutter or an oversized bag. With BiKN, we only have to remember to charge the tags every couple of weeks. The "find" graphic on the app works like a beacon to let us know if we're heading in the right or wrong direction.
The bad: The high-pitched sound is great when searching for something in a quiet place, such as your house, but if you're out at a noisy restaurant, the sound is harder to hear. TRIBUNE

SOLEX COLLEGE

Graduation from a physical therapist assistant education program accredited by the Commission on Accreditation in Physical Therapy Education (CAPTE), 1111 North Fairfax Street, Alexandria, VA 22314; phone: 703-706-3245; accreditation@apta.org is necessary for eligibility to sit for the licensure examination, which is required in all states. SOLEX College is seeking accreditation of a new physical therapist assistant education program from CAPTE. The program has submitted an Application for Candidacy, which is the formal application required in the pre-accreditation stage. Submission of this document does not assure that the program will be granted Candidate for Accreditation status. Achievement of Candidate for Accreditation status is required prior to implementation of the [professional/technical] phase of the program; therefore, no students may be enrolled in [professional/technical] courses until Candidate for Accreditation status has been achieved. Further, though achievement of Candidate for Accreditation status signifies satisfactory progress toward accreditation, it does not assure that the program will be granted accreditation.

We're pretty sure the tributes never had access to this 'Hunger Games' merch

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

You've probably been so distracted by the rippling abs of "Magic Mike" and the super-heroics of "The Amazing Spider-Man" this summer that you COMPLETELY forgot about Katniss and her "Hunger Games" adventures. Fear not, friend of Panem. The DVD hits stores Aug. 18, but in the meantime, Target has released a somewhat (read: very) ridiculous line of "Hunger Games"-themed products to tickle your fancy. While you may not be able to afford the $999 14-karat gold mockingjay pin or the $349 leather Katniss coat, here are some slightly less insanely expensive items you'll probably need before heading into the arena.

DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM
@REDEYEDANA

Katniss in 'The Hunger Games'

Movie standee 'Gale' $19.99

There's nothing more comforting than waking in the middle of the night to see cardboard Gale watching over you. We actually thought cardboard cutouts were way more expensive, so this is a great purchase if you feel like creeping out your best friend or just need a life-size paper doll.

Bookend mockingjay $28.99

We all know this is for bashing your enemies' brains in, but it probably looks quite nice propping up your extended version of Shakespeare's complete works, right? The Bard would approve.

Mockingjay triple chain necklace $24.99

With three simple steps, it easily becomes either a snare for vermin, or a trip wire for enemies. Watch out for that giant hole up ahead!

Peeta pillowcase $14.99

It's like waking up in a cave with your manlove, but with no morning breath. Plus, this Peeta is way less gravely injured and probably likes to cuddle more. As if that were possible.

'Bird Buds' earbuds $9.99

What do you listen to before heading to your almost-certain death? We'd probably go with a mix of the "Star Wars" theme, Beyonce's "Countdown" and Ricky Martin's greatest hits. Maybe some Rage Against the Machine. Maybe some TLC. Whatever fits the mood.

MARKETING MAYHEM

Man-eating shark costume $89.99

This, for some reason, was in the related items. It probably would be a great choice for scaring the crap out of your enemies in the arena, so we recommend you pick one up.
